Jeff Main, Executive Director
Point of Pride

I am writing to address the automatic revocation of Point of Pride's tax-exempt status by the IRS due to failure to file required tax returns.

It is important to clarify that this revocation was not due to any wrongdoing by the Organization. The revocation arose from several oversights by your former tax preparers.

According to notices received from the IRS, it appears that the former tax preparers did not properly file the Organization's requested change in the fiscal year, resulting in the rejection of the tax return filing for the year ended December 31, 2020. This situation was never resolved, leaving the tax year open as unfiled.

Furthermore, it was discovered that the former tax preparers paper-filed Form 990 for the years ending December 31, 2021, and 2022. The IRS mandated electronic filing for all nonprofit organizations effective July 2022, and thus did not acknowledge the paper-filed returns by your former tax preparers.

It is my understanding that the previous tax preparers assured Point of Pride that the returns could be filed on paper. However, there is currently no evidence of any correspondence with the IRS confirming an exemption to the electronic filing requirement. If these returns had been filed electronically, even if submitted after the due date, it is highly unlikely that the revocation would have occurred.

This letter confirms that Point of Pride has taken immediate steps to rectify this issue. The Organization has initiated the process to file the necessary paperwork for reinstatement of its tax-exempt status and is working closely with my firm to ensure all required documents are submitted accurately and promptly.

I am confident that Point of Pride's tax-exempt status will be reinstated in due course. The Organization has assured me that it understands the importance of maintaining its tax-exempt status and the potential implications this situation may have for the Organization and its donors.

Sincerely,

Alana Tamara Miller
